Dear Mr. Lewis:

It was very thoughtful of you to write me as you did about the talk that I made before the Harvard Business School.

I sincerely appreciate your generous comments and I am, of course, pleased to learn from you that the Conference was a success.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Dulles:

Many thanks for your helpfulness in making the Harvard Business School National Business Conference a success. As you may have gathered, we had the largest banquet attendance for many years.

Your speech was extremely well received, and we who know you broke into your Princeton reunion to make it are particularly appreciative.

Yours sincerely,
